The benefits of the Food Program:

For the Child:

Proper nutrition during the early years of childhood ensures appropriate development and reduces physical and educational problems later in life. Eating patterns and habits established during these years help determine the quality of one's diet throughout life. Children participating in the food program enjoy meals that meet USDA nutrition requirements. These nutritionally complete meals help the child learn and grow and are the foundations that will help them achieve their fullest potential in the future.

For the Parent:

Parents are assured that their child(ren) receive high quality, well-balanced meals. The child is less likely to experience fatigue and illness, and therefore, less time a parent must be absent from work. Children are more likely to be healthy, happy, and develop at a normal physical and intellectual pace. The child is also teaching the parent about fun and easy recipes that they can make together at home.

For the Provider:

Providers receive valuable nutrition education that helps them identify the proper foods to feed in amounts appropriate for young age groups. They obtain help in understanding how to encourage positive eating habits that end up benefiting a child throughout life. The financial reimbursement helps them to be able to afford to serve nutritionally complete foods.
